TOBACCO

MEETING

Session of Burley Tobacco Society Held.—Pooling The Crop Deferred Until June Meeting.

Winchester Democrat: The members of the Burley Tobacco Society met here Tuesday and contrary to their usual custom, finished their work the first day. The meetings were held in secret and but little except routine business was transacted.

Most of the delegates reported that a very large crop will be set in their respective counties, but some expressed the opinion that the actual crop will not be as large as is now anticipated. While outrages are already being reported from some sections of the black belt where plant beds are being sown with bluegrass seed, there is no anticipation of trouble anywhere in the Burley belt, and it is thought that every grower may raise as much as he pleases without molestation. In view of the big crop expected and the unreliability of labor, many expected the crop to be more or less neglected and with the result that the crop will be of poor quality.

The pledge adopted some time ago will probably be modified to some extent, but no steps in that direction were taken at this meeting.

A feeling is growing that there should be closer affiliation with the parent Society, the American Society of Equity, and that closer practical relations should be maintained between the two organizations.

It was expected that some practical steps would be taken looking towards the pooling of the crop of 1909, but it was felt that any statistics procured now would not be reliable and that nothing should be done until the crop has been set. Further consideration of this matter was therefore deferred until the next meeting which will be held here in June. The campaign this year will not be a long one. The growers thoroughly understand the question and when the Society is ready the matter will be put squarely to the grower without the mass meetings and other educational features of the past campaign. This will probably be done by the precinct organizations and through the county organizations and the information will be given to the District Committee.

If a large per cent. of the crop is not placed in the pool there will be no further attempt to control the sale as those who bore the burden of the last fight do not feel like making another when those who decline to enter the pool will get as much or more benefit than they do.

The American Tobacco Company is taking the tobacco it recently purchased as fast as it can be handled and is paying for it promptly.

There seems to be a disposition among some of the independent firms to be dilatory about taking and paying for their purchases and some of them seem disposed to raise objections on a very small basis of facts.

It is felt that all the money for the pooled crops of 1906 and 1907 will have been received and disbursed by the time for the next meeting and that everything will be out of the way for action on the new crop.

Obituary.

As the gentle breeze whistled through the leafless boughs, and the sun was shedding its beautiful rays over the earth the snowy curtains of heaven were lifted, the golden gates pushed open and through the shining portals of God, a little angel glided. The white we, who were left behind in our earthly homes, found that a dear little loved one had fallen asleep in Jesus.

Teddy Miller, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Miller, born Oct. 29, 1902, died March 16, 1909, age 6 years, 4 months and 16 days.

None could claim a more beautiful, sweet and gentle disposition than he. All who knew Teddy loved him. To mourn his departure he leaves a kind and loving father and mother, three brothers and two sisters, a little sister having preceded him to the "Great Beyond."

Funeral services were conducted at the residence the following day, by Father Gabe of Harrodsburg, assisted by Father P. F. Hennessy of Springfield. The remains were laid to rest in the Williamsburg cemetery. The white community extends condolence to the bereaved family.

Columbia Editor Dead.

Columbia, Ky., March 22.—J. S. Stapp, editor and publisher of the Columbia Spectator, and one of Adair county's best known citizens, died yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, after several weeks' illness.

Mr. Stapp had been in failing health for some time, and some weeks ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis and had been unconscious most of the time. Mr. Stapp was prominent in political affairs in Adair county, being a staunch Republican and a fearless worker in the ranks of his party. He was a prominent Mason. The deceased leaves a wife and five children. The funeral will be held at 10 o'clock at his late residence near Stapp Springs, and burial will be at the Providence church.

Mr. Stapp was noted as a philanthropist. His last philanthropic act was the endowment last week of a college to be established at Daltart, Tex. He endowed Russell Creek College at Campbellsville, Ky., and built many churches. He was editor of the Columbia Spectator and a man of great wealth.

GUN DISPUTE

Engaged in By Nad Hardin and Amos Trigg, Both Colored, Yesterday Morning.

Nad Hardin and Amos Trigg, both well known negroes, loaded upon bad booze yesterday morning, it is alleged, and proceeded to pass the compliments of the day in various and sundry but very strenuous ways. It is said that Trigg went to Nad's domicile and engaged in an argument with Nad which became so warm that Amos finally pulled his gun. Nad, however, got this and pitched his guest out of doors. Amos picked up a rock, however, according to report and returned to avenge the insult offered and possibly recover his weapon. Nad let one bullet from the latter go after the belligerent Amos and he decided that that was all that he wanted and started for town double quick, his nerves somewhat shaken but otherwise unharmed. Both men were put under arrest but Nad was finally released on bond.

VALLEY HILL.

S. T. Hardins and sons, Arthur and Edgar, of near Fredericksburg, were in our midst Saturday, on business.

Mesdames S. H. Bishop and T. B. Flaughner, of Springfield, visited friends here Wednesday.

Mr. A. B. Walker sold a mule to John Brown last week. Price unknown.

Mr. E. J. Pinkston and son, of Poor-town, visited relatives in this section Sunday.

Master Leo Hardy, of Louisville, visited his mother at this place the latter part of last week.

Miss Pearl Gostley was the guest of her cousin Miss Nancy Gostley, at Cedar View, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Reed visited relatives near here Saturday.

Misses Pearl and Imogene Gostley were guests at Elm Hill, Wednesday and Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Tatum entertained several of their friends at lunch Friday evening in honor of their visitors Misses Alice and Margie Thompson of Highland Park.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gostley attended church at New Hope Sunday.

Mr. H. M. Grundy and Mrs. J. Y. Mayes and son, Grundy, of Springfield, visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Grundy of this place Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gostley, who have been voluntarily quarantined at their home at this place, on account of their little sons, Albert and Vivian having scarlet fever, are glad to report that the children are almost entirely well at this writing.

Several from this place attended "The Cry Baby," at the Opera House in Springfield Friday evening.

The sowing of tobacco beds in this section was completed last week, and, although somewhat late, the prospects are favorable for an unusual acreage of the weed this season. Should indications prove true, doubtless the prevailing prices this fall will be very unsatisfactory to the scores of raisers. "Regulate the acreage."

We regret to learn of the sudden change in Mr. E. L. Davidson's health, and hope he will soon recover. We are also sorry that he was compelled to give up the editorship of the News-Leader, but wish the new management good luck.

"THE END."

The sun may be clouded, yet ever the sun Will sweep on its course till the cycle is run. And when into chaos the systems are hurled, Again shall the Builder reshape a new world.

Your path may be clouded, uncertain your goal; Move on, for the orbit is fixed for your soul; And though it may lead into darkness of night, The torch of the Builder shall give it new light.

You were, and you will be; know this while you are: Your spirit has traveled both long and afar. It came from the Source, to the Source it returns: The spark that was lighted eternally burns.

It slept in the jewel, it leaped in the wave; It roamed in the forest, it rose from the grave; It took on strange garb for long ones of years, And now in the soul of yourself it appears.

From body to body your spirit speeds on; It seeks a new form when the old one is gone; And the form that it finds is the fabric you wrought On the loom of the mind, with the fiber of thought.

As dew is drawn upward, in rain to descend, Your thoughts drift away and in destiny blend. You cannot escape them; or petty, or great, Or evil, or noble, they fashion your fate.

Somewhere on some planet, sometime and somehow, Your life will reflect all the thoughts of your now. The law is unerring; no blood can atone; The structure you rear you must live in alone.

From cycle to cycle, through time and through space You lives with your longings will ever keep pace, And all that you ask for, and all you desire, Must come at your bidding, as flames out of fire.

You are your own devil, you are your own god; You fashioned the paths that your footsteps have trod And no one can save you from error or sin Until you shall hark to the spirit within.

Once list to that voice and all tumult is done; Your life is the life of the Infinite One; In the hurrying race you are conscious of pause, With love for the purpose and love for the cause.

Sues For Divorce.

The following news item was taken from a Nashville paper:

Mrs. Margaret Leachman Norman filed a suit in the Chancery Court Wednesday against C. R. Norman, to whom she was married at Springfield, Ky., in 1907, asking for divorce on the ground of cruel treatment. The defendant is a commercial traveler, and various incidents at the home on West End avenue are related. Complainant says defendant took their child away from their apartments, and declared she should never see the child again, and on one occasion she was compelled to sit up all night. Complainant asks for a divorce, alimony and the custody of the child.

Mrs. Norman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Leachman of this county.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Miller extend their heartfelt gratitude to their Protestant, as well as their Catholic friends, for their kindness and sympathy in their recent bereavement.

Etly Acquitted.

Courier-Journal: John B. Etly, twice tried for the alleged murder of his wife and once sentenced to life imprisonment on conviction of the charge, was "set down on the sidewalk" last evening by the jury in the Criminal Court, where the case has been on trial since Monday. The jury, to agree on its verdict acquitting the prisoner, consumed forty-five minutes, one minute less than was required by the jury last year, when a verdict sentencing him to jail for life was returned.

When John B. Etly left the courtroom last evening by the front door, he left a free man, unrestrained for the first time since November 14, 1906, when he was taken into custody on the charge of murder. When the verdict of acquittal was brought in and read one of the wildest scenes ever seen in that courtroom took place. Such a demonstration, it is asserted, never was witnessed there. The room was still well filled—it has been crowded for three days—and all the officers of the court, from Judge Joseph Pryor down to the humblest deputy sheriff, were unable to stop the cheering.

The men surged up to Etly, who was dissolved in tears, and literally bore him out of the courtroom and set him down on the sidewalk. For some time after they had reached the outside of the courtroom the crowd continued its demonstration and it was some minutes before Etly, accompanied by his brother, D. J. Etly, of Pittsburg, and J. D. Up-ton, uncle by marriage, could get away to themselves. They were followed for some distance as they made their way toward the jail, which they did not enter, passing by on Center street the structure where Etly has been confined for over two years.

Good Show.

The comedy "The Cry Baby" was presented to a fair sized and certainly very appreciative audience at the Opera House Friday. The play in itself is bright, with quite a good deal of humor and some pathos. It shows the drawing room of Eastern society and depicts the life of the Western plains, but is pleasing throughout. The company as a whole was good, each member properly interpreting and faithfully rendering his part. The leading man, Mr. G. Carlton Guy, however is the leader in fact as well as in name. His facial expression is something fine, while his vocal expression is thoroughly harmonious with the facial and both are what the play requires.

Those who go to see the Cry Baby will pass a pleasant evening and see a good show and incidentally hear some good singing.

Tax Collector Sued.

Enquirer: On Monday of this week in the Taylor Circuit Clerk's office was filed by the Administrator of the late D. S. Wade against H. N. Beauchamp, as Special Tax Collector for Taylor County for 1908, and against his bondsmen, a West Virginia Bonding Company, asking that the same H. N. Beauchamp and his bondsmen pay over to the estate of the late D. S. Wade that amount due on the 20 cent levy made by the Taylor Fiscal Court at its April term, 1908, for the purpose of a part payment on the judgment against Taylor County in favor of the Bank of Columbia.

This judgment was paid to the Bank of Columbia by D. S. Wade's estate and was thereupon transferred by the Bank of Columbia to Wade's estate, and it is upon the aforesaid judgment that this suit is based.

Next Saturday the Republicans of the four counties of this, the Eleventh, judicial district will hold their county conventions to name delegates to the district convention to be held in Lebanon March 31. Thurman to succeed himself as Judge and Hon. Clem S. Hill to succeed Hon. R. L. Durham as Commonwealth's Attorney.

COURT

PROCEEDINGS

News From the Circuit Court, the County Court and the Police Court.

Last Friday at a special session of the Washington Circuit Court, the case of Bohm Lucas vs. J. G. Howell, etc., was tried. The suit was in equity and was to enforce a lien of the plaintiff for the board and handling of two horses belonging to the defendant, J. G. Howell. To the plaintiff's petition the defendant answered, cross petitioned and counter claimed. The trial consumed a day and resulted in a judgment for the plaintiff for $215 and for I. H. Thurman for his mortgage lien of $125. An order for the sale of the horses to satisfy the judgment was entered. Judge C. T. Atkinson of Bardonia tried the case.

Last Saturday, in the police court Tom Ray, colored, was tried on the charge of selling whiskey in local option territory. The chief prosecuting witness was Frank Leschman, a negro boy, who swore that on Saturday morning, Ciel Mickens, another negro, gave him a quarter with which to purchase some whiskey, and that he got it from Tom. Of course he was contradicted by the defendant, but the jury took the view that he was guilty and gave him $60 fine and trimmings.

Monday was County Court day and Judge Litsey held his monthly term of the County Court. The most important business transacted was the probating of the wills of the late John Simpson and the late Peter Shehan, two of the best known citizens of Washington county, who died within the last month.

Notice!

To Stockmen of Washington and adjoining counties.

Red Bird Stock Farm

(or better known as the Jim McElroy farm) one-half mile from Fair Ground on Bardstown pike.

WE WILL offer at your service the best line of Stock that can be had. We have worked to get the best bred ones that could be had. Every one is registered and have the papers on them. Why shouldn't you all patronize them? It is for your good; we have the best. We offer this season the following well-known stock:

RED BIRD

The great Saddle Horse, as great a breeder in the State. Will be limited to 25 mares, positively no more under any circumstances. All having good mares and want to breed to Red Bird book them at once. We are going to stand him at $30 TO INSURE A LIVING COLT TO STAND UP AND SUCK. You may think that high, but it is not, because you who have good mares stand so much better chance; that will do away with common mares. Mr. Pemberton, of Elizabethtown, the best saddle horse judge in the state, told me last fall that Red Bird was the best breeder in his knowledge, said he would soon have a colt by him as Bourbon King that stood at $50 last year and perhaps at $75 this season. Why gentlemen think of it, the great blood and what a reputation he has; that is worth $30. Red Bird has the highest price colts to sell from the tit than any horse I can mention; prices ranging from $100 to $212.

MOKO PEARL

(By Moko)

The great Trotting Horse, has a mark of 2:24 and has been a mile in 2:18, a beautiful bay, 2 white feet behind and a star. He is 16 hands high.

Bouncing Canought

Imported English Hackney, a beautiful chestnut sorrel, 3 white feet and a snip, as fine an actor as your ever looked upon; goes high and fast. Season $20. Be sure and see him, he is a great horse.

NELSON II

Imported German Coach, 16 hands high; weighs about 1400 pounds, with good action and steps good. Just the kind for farm mares and mule makers. Season $15.

BILL GOEBEL

The Great Mule Jack. He needs no explanation, because you all know him and have heard of him as being a breeder of half sorrel mules; best color on earth; several of his colts last fall selling from $115 to $150. A 2 year old selling at Thurman's sale for $297.50.

STONEWALL

We having bought half interest in Stonewall, or better known as Shelby Tuck, it is needless for me to try to tell you anything about him, for you know him as well as I do. You have heard of the $100 mules sold by him.

Gentlemen, I can say with safety and am sure you all agree with me that we have two of the best breeding Jacks in the country. I notice when weaning time comes, the best mule men of other counties as well as our own flock to old Washington for good mules. Jacks will stand at $8 for horse mules; $10 for mare mules; $10 for jennetts. Stonewall is quite a good jennett Jack. I will be glad to show you our stock anytime you come and will be glad to have you. Bills will be out by April 1st.

Thanking you all for last year's patronage and hoping it will increase this year, I remain, Yours Respectfully,

GERM-GATHERERS IN GOTHAM

For some time past, New York has been making elaborate efforts to keep its streets clean. Various appliances have been experimented with, and the results have been tested bacteriologically. Plates similar to those used in the laboratory for making bacteria-cultures were exposed in the streets in different localities, and the number of bacteria-colonies which developed on them during exposure at particular spots before and after the streets had been cleaned gave a ready, if scientifically rough, idea of the effectiveness of the apparatus. Thus, in Fifth avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, a plate exposed on a windy day before the street was cleaned gave 320 separate colonies of bacteria. These were not necessarily of a harmful nature. After the street had been cleaned, another exposure of a bacteria-culture plate at the same spot revealed only 120 colonies.

TO CHECK TYPHOID

VACCINATION TO BE TRIED IN ARMY CAMPS.

Military Authorities Decide That American Troops Can Be Immune and Seek Volunteers for Treatment.

Washington.—Immunization against typhoid in army camps by vaccination is to be undertaken by the military authorities.

The whole matter is to be frankly put before the army, and individuals are to be invited to volunteer for vaccination. No soldier or officer will be compelled to submit to anti-typhoid vaccination against his will, but an effort will be made by lectures and examples to show the soldier the advantage of availing himself of such a simple and easy way of escaping one of the worst and most dreaded of army camp diseases. These measures are to be taken as a result of the recommendations of the board of eminent physicians appointed to consider measures for preventing typhoid fever in army camps. It was named at the instance of Brig. Gen. Robert M. O'Reilly, then surgeon general of the army, and included in its membership were Drs. Victor C. Vaughan of Ann Arbor, William T. Councilman of Boston, John H. Musser of Philadelphia, Alexander Lambert of New York, Simon Flexner of New York, and William S. Thayer of Baltimore.

A summary of the board's conclusions were made public recently. This report, which was practically issued both during the civil and the Spanish-American wars typhoid fever prevailed to a great extent among the troops, especially among the younger men in regiments recently recruited. Old soldiers were not often affected, and as regiments learned how to take care of themselves the disease tended to diminish.

In times of peace when the army is stationed at its various garrison posts throughout the country, the report says, there is less than half as much typhoid among soldiers as is found among that part of the civil population of military age. But, unfortunately, the moment the troops go into camps and large numbers of new and untrained men are recruited and mobilized the conditions change for the worse.

It has long been recognized, says the report, that a person who has once had the typhoid is practically immune against a second attack and the medical profession has now found in anti-typhoid vaccination a simple and harmless way of artificially inducing almost the same amount of protection. In the last few years 15,000 men have been treated in this way with excellent effect and without a single untoward result.

ADDS TO HEARERS BY ADS.

Pastor of Georgia Church Uses Press to Good Advantage.

Gainesville, Ga.—Rev. T. M. Elliott, pastor last year of the Methodist church at Villa Rica and formerly a member of the staff of Constitution news-gatherers, has begun his year of pastorate of St. Paul's church in Gainesville in a unique campaign of advertising. Rev. C. P. Machman and Mr. Elliott exchanged charges for 1909.

Under Mr. Machman the church moved its location from West Myrtle street to the heart of the town, buying the former Presbyterian church site and building. The new First Methodist church has been completed in Green street and the congregation has moved from the old quarters. There was no church of this denomination in the part of the city now served by St. Paul's, which has taken on new life and increased enthusiasm.

Mr. Elliott has covered the town with dodgers advertising the St. Paul's location, services and other data concerning the work of the new year; he has utilized the local press for a quarter page advertisement of St. Paul's and is altogether proving himself such an enterprising, wide-awake worker along up to date but hitherto unemployed lines that St. Paul's is attracting more attention than ever and obtaining larger congregations than have ever been known in the history of the church.

TWO DOLLARS IN BIRD NEST.

Ohio Man Thinks Bill One He dropped in Michigan.

Saginaw, Mich.—While doing repair work at the plant of a cold storage and produce company, a workman found the remnants of a $2 bill lying in the nest of a sparrow.

The bill, or what was left of it, was taken to the bank and redeemed. P. W. Hunsicker of Akron, O., read of the find and wrote:

"It amused me when I read the article, for it recalled to my mind the losing of a $2 bill on Easter Sunday last year while in Saginaw at church. 'Unless some one can say that he gave the bird a $2 bill with which to line her nest, I shall always think she used my $2 bill.'"

Hen Is Champion Layer.

New York.—Mrs. George W. Applegate has an industrious and remunerative hen. Since December 3 this hen has laid 130 eggs. Although she has beaten all records at laying eggs, she is modest and retiring, and so far from boasting that she emitted not even a cockle. Mrs. Applegate was astonished to find 12 eggs in the hen's nest the other day at sundown. Gasp! she stared at the hen.

The hen, with a suspicion of a smile, looked at Mrs. Applegate as if saying: "I'm rather full, eh?"

No nervous collapse threatened the hen. She preserved her mental poise and, attending to business strictly, laid seven more eggs during the night. She kept up the continuous performance all the next day; 12 eggs were the outcome.

The hen now appears to be in a good, healthy condition, but there is a drooping air about her, which seems to indicate that she is disappointed at not having been able to lay any more eggs since.

Seventh-Street Station Burns.

Courier-Journal: Fire caused by crossed wires in the attic resulted in a loss of $50,000 to the Seventh-street station, Seventh and Water streets, yesterday afternoon, and for a time threatened to destroy the structure. The flames spread with remarkable rapidity and employees had great difficulty in making their escape. Women waiting for the arrival of the New Orleans special halted and had to be carried from the building, while G. T. Roach, chief clerk to Superintendent A. A. Egan, was forced to jump from a window and sustained dangerous injuries.

J. H. Smithson, of New Orleans, was the first person to discover the fire and immediately rushed into the depot and warned the employees. Patrolman T. J. Price shortly afterward saw flames issuing from the attic as he was making a post at Seventh and Main streets. He rushed to Sixth and Main streets and sounded an alarm from "Fatal 48." When the No. 2 and No. 5 engine companies arrived on the scene the entire building was ablaze.

Shortly after Patrolman Price had sounded an alarm from Box 48, a telephone message was sent to the tower and a general alarm was sounded. Fifteen minutes after the arrival of Acting Chief Frank Hager a fourth alarm was sounded, taking every engine company in the city with the exception of the No. 16 and No. 17 companies, to the scene. When Acting Chief Hager arrived the flames had spread to the second floor and the entire building appeared doomed to destruction.

$100 Reward, $100.

Human Beings Are Sold at Auction.—A Typical Slavery Days Scene in New York.

Many of the newspapers of America—at least those who did not deliberately suppress it—printed in recent issues the following Associated Press dispatch, sent from New York City. The reading of it should bring the blush of shame to the faces of all justice-loving freeborn Americans. Last fall we were told that if Wm. J. Bryan was elected President, the laboring man would starve forthwith, on account of a lack of confidence. When Mr. Taft was elected, it was announced that confidence had been restored. Confidence lost and restored under a Republican administration, mind you. Now, comes this object lesson of conditions prevailing among workmen after the elec-

Stomach Muscles In Old Age

How Old People May Retain or Restore Good Health

Usually the bowels are not so active in middle or advanced years as in youth. Just as the eyes grow dim, the skin wrinkles, the hair gray, the muscles flabby, so do the internal organs show their age if we could but see them. However we sometimes find a person whose age is near the mated three-score and ten and yet his step is sprightly, his eye keen, his flesh firm, his appetite good and his bowels regular, and upon close questioning you will find a life's history of right-living, good food, keen appetite, perfect digestion and regular bowel action. Regular bowels and proper digestion of the food we eat is absolutely necessary to the enjoyment of good health by old or young. If the readers of this article are interested, we are glad to tell them how they can restore good health and prolong their lives. Step into a drug store and purchase a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It will cleanse the bowels of any waste matter that has clogged them up and restore to them strength and nerve force for regular natural daily action. It aids digestion by stimulating the stomach and digestive glands to a proper and sufficient secretion of the fluids necessary to perfect digestion. It acts on the liver and kidneys in a mild, quiet yet effective manner. Rev. A. J. Fletcher, of Rutherford, Tenn., is 80 years old, and it cured him of 60 years of dyspepsia. W. W. Sterling, Sioux City, Ia., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best medicine I ever used and I am 88 years old." B. F. Thompson, Shenandoah, Ia., says: "I suffered 15 years with dyspepsia and it cured me." It is certain and effective in the most obstinate old cases, and yet mild and safe for the most delicate woman or child. All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Pepsin Syrup Co., 304 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. Be glad to send a free sample to any one who has never used it and will give it a fair trial.

tion of Mr. Taft and the restoration of confidence. Read it. It may not do your heart good, but it will probably set you to thinking.

"An auction of white men the other night was the spectacle that drew thousands of persons to the Parkview Presbyterian church in Flatbush. The action was in reality an object lesson of the conditions prevailing among working people and served to get jobs for a number of men.

"The church was crowded when Rev. John E. Long began an address in which he outlined the pitiable conditions of many a man who was willing to work but unable to secure a position. Outside the church a crowd of 3,000 persons clamored and struggled to get into the already crowded house of worship.

"Mr. Long introduced Edward T. O'Laughlin, who was to conduct the auction. O'Laughlin outlined his plan to which the men he would present had agreed. This was to offer them as it were on the block to the person who would give them a job through which they could earn subsistence and a few dollars beside if possible. The money end, however, was an after consideration, as the men who had come to him wanted food and shelter principally.

"Mr. O'Laughlin then led on to the platform 50 men, young and old, all more or less shabbily garbed and displaying in their ways the pinch of war. All of the men wore black masks so as to conceal their identity to all but purchasers. Each man was numbered as they were put on the block.

"No. 10 was the first man presented. He was described as an iron worker and molder, long out of work and in want and willing to work at anything.

"Several men in the audience walked to the platform and, as in slavery days, critically surveyed the subject. One man went so far as to feel of the man's limbs and muscles. It was finally announced that the man had been sold to W. F. Copeland, who would give him employment in an industrial association in New York. The terms were not announced.

"No. 21 was the next up. He was described as a man who had taken part in the Boer war and who had seen service in the United States army in the Philippines. He was an electrician by trade. No. 21 went to a Flatbush family, the name of which was withheld by request. It was announced that the family would give him $55 a month and board.

"No. 23, a painter, went to a Newark, N. J., man who promised him $10 a week, while No. 14, a gray haired man, was taken away by a young man who said he would give him a home and work at once.

"Thus six men in all were disposed of when, as the hour was waxing late, the spectators, many of whom keenly felt the scenes they had witnessed, formed themselves into a committee, took charge of the remaining 44 men and promised to find homes and jobs for them.

"Mr. Long and several others than addressed the people outside the church, telling what had been done and asking aid for the many unemployed in Greater New York.

"John D. Rockefeller, who had been invited to be present, sent a telegram regretting his inability to attend."

Taylor County.

Sentinel: Dix & King is the name of a new firm in the brick work line in this city. Mr. King is from Springfield, and is an experienced workman. His partner, Mr. Thomas Dix, is an old "residential," and needs no introduction to Taylor county citizens. This new firm has the contract for building the new business house on Main street for Dr. O. R. Reesor.

"Judge" John B. Love, one of the best known citizens of the county, died at his home in this county last Friday night, in what is known as the "Bear Track" section. His remains were interred at Palestine last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Love, or "Judge" as he was familiarly known, was a good and honest citizen, and one that the editor of this paper always admired.

Last Wednesday afternoon at about 1:30 o'clock, Mr. Frank W. Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Cox, died at his home on Lebanon Avenue after great suffering from a spinal affliction of several years standing. The funeral service was held at the Methodist church yesterday afternoon, and the interment was at Brookside cemetery.

John Edwards, of color, was arrested last Tuesday afternoon by Chief of Police Robert Hord charged with selling liquor in a local option county. Wednesday he was tried in the Police Court and fined $100 and cost by that venerable dispenser of justice, Judge J. H. Williams.

Workmen on the new Court House are very busy putting in the steel ceiling to keep the English sparrows from eating the Judges, officers and lawyers up. The new ceiling will look fine when completed.

A Hurry Up Call.

Quick! Mr. Druggist—Quick!—A box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve—Here's a quarter—For the love of Moses, hurry! Baby's burned himself terribly—Johnnie cut his foot with the axe—Mamie's scalded—Pa can't walk from piles—Billie has boils—and my corns ache. She got it and soon cured all the family. It's the greatest healer on earth. Sold by Haydon & Robertson.

Shouted For Joy.

Broadhurst, Ky., March 12.—Great excitement was occasioned in the little Methodist church here to-day when Mrs. Elizabeth Sowders, an invalid, who had not walked a step for 30 years, jumped from her carriage during the sermon and began talking glibly and shouting with much joy as a result of her instant recovery.

Rats!

A captain on an ocean liner tells the following story: Coming from the old country was a very nervous old lady who complained that she was sure there was a rat in her stateroom.

"Keep it there, madam," said the captain. "But do you like rats?" asked she. "I've got a nest in my cabin," retorted the brusque seaman. "And I never disturb them. When they leave the ship I do."

"Why, you must be superstitious," urged the dame.

"No, ma'am," wound up the captain. "I'm not, but the rats are."

Ring in Offertory.

After having taken the collection in the Culmington (Eng.) parish church the church warden noticed a gentleman's gold ring in the offertory box.

At the conclusion of the service the vicar announced that a gold ring had been either accidentally dropped into the box or given as a thank offering and would be restored to its owner if put in by mistake. No one claimed the ring.

Sleep

Sleep is nature's rebuilding period, when the energy used by the brain, muscles and organs is renewed. If you lose sleep, your system is robbed of the strength sleep should give. Continued loss of sleep multiplies this loss until you become a physical wreck. Dr. Miles' Nervine quiets the irritated nerves and brings refreshing, invigorating sleep. Nervine contains no opiates, and therefore leaves no bad after-effects.

"For over two years I suffered untold agonies; my friends thought I was going crazy. I could not sleep nor rest at all. I tried different doctors, but failed to find relief. My head would ache all the time; I was like one drunk; could not concentrate my mind, and was so restless and worried that sleep was out of the question. After taking one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine I felt wonderfully changed. I am now on my third bottle and am gaining all the time. I can lie down and sleep like a child, and am able to do my work."

Mrs. MAY SCOTT, English, Ind.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nervine, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.

To Messrs. Jas. R. Noe and Jos. W. Poln, the new owners and editors of the News-Leader, The Sun extends the right hand of fellowship. Mr. Noe, who has spent his life in a newspaper office, knows that a country editor has many aggravations. To Mr. Poln, who is just entering journalism, we will say that in the profession there is also much of consolation. The proprietors are both capable and energetic young men and we wish for their paper the same success it has enjoyed under the capable editorship of Col. E. L. Davison.

TO HESITATE LONG IS TO FAIL.

Successful Business Man Must Have Attribute of Courage.

Many a man fails because he does not dare to take risks, to take the initiative.

When do you expect to do anything distinctive in life? When do you expect to get out of the ranks of mediocrity? The men who do original things are fearless. There is a lot of dare in their make-up, a great deal of boldness. They are not afraid to take chances, to shoulder responsibility, to endure inconvenience and privation. There never was a time when the quality of courage was so absolutely indispensable in the business world as it is today. It does not matter how many success qualities you possess, young man, if you lack courage you will never get anywhere. Not even honesty or perseverance will take its place. There is no substitute for courage.

It does not matter how well educated you may be, or how good a training you may have had, or how good a position, if you are a hesitator, if you lack that courage which dares to risk all on your judgment, you will never get above mediocrity.

The men who stand at the top of their line of endeavor stand there because they have the courage of their convictions. They had the courage to climb, had the nerve to undertake even against the advice of others.—Success Magazine.

TOOK UMBRAGE AT ASPERSION.

Citizens Resented Being Voted for as Town's "Meanest Man."

Old Scrooge might be a philanthropic Carnegie alongside certain tight-wads in Mount Vernon. But William Friedberg has no license to determine publicly who are the men who would squeeze a dollar until the eagle yelled: "Help! I'm melting!" For conducting a voting contest to determine the meanest man in Mount Vernon, Friedberg, who keeps a cigar store there, was fined five dollars by Judge Platt here. A warning went with the fine.

Friedberg lives in Astoria, but does business in Mount Vernon. He placed in his window a placard: "Come in and vote for the meanest man in Mount Vernon!" This was followed by a list of names. Conspicuous in the lot were the mayor and chief of police. Then came many solid and staid citizens. After every name was a number signifying the votes the owner of the name had received so far.

Great was the wrath of the so-called "meanest men." Friedberg was ordered to take the sign out of the window, but he refused to do so. His indictment for libel followed. In court he pleaded guilty, but asserted he did not know he was violating any law.—White Plains Cor. New York Sun.

The Power of Enthusiasm.

Enthusiasm is one magnet of power. You must fire every event with it, touch thoughts and acts with it; it will transmute dross into gold, drudgery into delight. What matters if the soul which lives beside you is cold and selfish. Set him a good example! Joy is sunshine and he will feel it. Every trite task is a chance for power. For the qualities which they bring out are God's gifts which fit us to enjoy better things. Easy things will come, if you have spent your heart's blood, in gaining strength, for the very goal of power is the ease which comes from strength. We laugh at things and people who used to cower or annoy us, we do gracefully and swiftly the tasks, once so hard. One by one, we have unraveled our chains, we are free!—Nautilus.

Sensation in "Mystery Ship."

Sydney, Australia, has had a novelty in the shape of a "mystery ship." An American steamer, the Coronet, arrived by night in the harbor unannounced. It was peopled by a strange-looking crowd of men, women and children. The officers were dressed in clerical attire—long coats and white ties. Nobody was allowed on board save the government medical officer and the harbor master. The Sydney reporters ascertained that the ship is connected with the newest American sect, the "Holy Ghost and Us," whose head, a man named Stanford, claiming to be the reincarnated Elijah, is on board. The Coronet has been cruising for some months among the Pacific islands.

That is what you are advertising, and it will be of interest to the public. And bring to you that increase of business you are looking for if you give us your store news to print.

SUPPOSED CORPSE SHOCKS MOURNERS

HE SITS UP WHILE UNDERTAKER IS PREPARING HIM FOR BURIAL.

LATTER SEES THE BODY HEAVE

Speaks When Hand is Plunged Into Jug of Cold Water—Able to Converse with Family in a Short Time.

London.—A Rochdale undertaker met with a startling experience the other day. During the last few days a traveler named James Fegan, 26 years of age, whose parents reside in Christian street, Preston, has been seriously ill with pneumonia at his lodgings in Rochdale. During the whole of Thursday night he was extremely ill, and apparently died at seven o'clock Friday morning.

A brother and sister of Fegan, who had been summoned from Preston, and the inmates of the house assured themselves that the man was dead, and straightway began to make arrangements for the funeral. The blinds were drawn and the doctor was informed that death had taken place. He prepared the customary certificate and arrangements were made about some insurance money.

The undertaker was informed, and three hours after death was supposed to have occurred he proceeded to the lodgings of Fegan. When he reached the room he found the man's head propped up with pillows rather high, and one of the pillows was removed in order to secure a more correct measurement. The undertaker, Albert Heywood, had already taken one measurement, and was proceeding with a second in order to verify the first, when he was startled to see the body slightly heave. At first he thought he must have been mistaken, but after waiting a second or two the body heaved again, and there was a slight twitching of the eyelids, which had been closed by the person who had "laid out" the body.

Mr. Heywood informed the brother, who commenced to shout wildly:

"Oh, I'm cold," muttered the Supposed Dead Man.

"Jim! Jim!" and shook Fegan vigorously. In response Fegan slightly moaned. A doctor was sent for, and the sister, who was in an adjoining room, was summoned. As soon as she learned that her brother lived she fainted.

Mr. Heywood then plunged the man's hands into a jug of cold water, and the shock caused him to speak. He muttered: "Oh, I'm cold." He had lain in a cold room three hours, with only a sheet covering "his body." By means of brandy Fegan revived so much that in half an hour he was, with assistance, able to sit up in bed. Medical attention was given, and later in the day he had recovered sufficiently to converse freely with his relatives and friends.

Bees Object to Moving.
Woodbury, N. J.—William Rambo, bus driver of this city, had an experience that he long will remember. He was engaged to take a hive of bees from North to South Woodbury, and, thinking they would rather occupy one of his buses than an express wagon, he placed the hive on the front seat. When German street was reached a few of the bees came out to investigate. They didn't like "midwinter moving, and called to others to come out. A council of war was held, and then the bees opened for business. Several tackled the horses, others the driver.

In the melee the hive was upset and Rambo came out victor, but he doesn't care to haul any more bees.

Amputees Wife's Foot with Razor.
Vassar, Mich.—Because his wife said she would rather have him perform the operation than a surgeon, Herman Strieter, who lives near her, amputated his wife's foot with a razor. Mrs. Strieter had been suffering from a peculiar disease which had settled in on her foot. Two physicians advised amputation. Mrs. Strieter gradually grew worse and her husband, at her request, without the assistance of a surgeon, performed the operation with a razor. Gangrene soon set in and the woman was taken to a Saginaw hospital.

CURRENT VERSE.

A Little More Cross.
A little more cross and a little less creed,
A little more beauty of brotherly deed;
A little more bearing of things to be borne,
With faith in the infinite triumph of morn.

A Little Less Doubt and a Little More Day
Of the simple, sweet service each day
Brings to view:
A little more cross, with its beautiful light,
Its lesson of love and its message of right.

A Little Less Sword and a Little More Rose
To soften the struggle and lighten the blows:
A little more worship, a little more prayer,
With the balm of its incense to brighten the care.

A Little More Song and a Little Less Sigh,
And a cheery good-day to the friends that go by.
A little more cross and a little more trust
In the beauty that blooms like a rose 'out of dust.

A Little More Lifting the Load of another,
A little more thought for the life of a brother.
A little more dreaming, a little more laughter,
A little more childhood, and sweetness thereafter.

A Little More Cross and a Little Less Hate,
With love in the lanes and a rose by the gate.
The Friends of Our Friends.
Our friends—well, they're all that fine folks ought to be,
But the friends of our friends—oh, my! We cannot account for our friends having friends.

Of that sort—and it's no use to try,
Take the Slashings! They're lovely, in all things just right.
But they're friends with the Whapee! And why is beyond comprehension. We can't see at all.

Why it is—and it's no use to try.
It's the same with the Jamsons, who're way up in G.
They're friends with the Bunneys! My eye!

That's just us to think of—it "wonders" us much—
Can't "solution" it—and it's no use to try.

And it's all-fired tough when at evening we cast
On our friends and find their friends there. By Moses! We can't "explanation" those friends.

Of our friends—and it's no use to try.
You.
I wear the stars like lilacs in my hair,
I feel the breeze like God's breath on my face.

Whispering an unknown word—and every where
I see the vision of a love-life face.

So strange it seems! A little while ago I knew not any of these lovely things:
To all my dreams the demons answered no.

Darkening the daylight with their evil wings.
Tell me, beloved, who are learned and wise.
How do you hold all beauty in your hand.

And all the host of heaven in your eyes,
And in your hours the moons of fairy-land?

You pass my threshold, and the narrow roof
Is peopled with a million forms of air.
The barren boughs of faith are all abloom.

And I am mute with wonder and with prayer.
—Ella Baker, in Smart Set.

A Man and His Pride.
He struggled along till he stood at the top.
On the peak that we call "Success."

And he gave little heed, nor even would stoop
At the cry of a soul in distress.

But proud of his strength and proud of his gold
And proud of the fame he had won.
He died in his pride when his story was told.

And the toll of his day was done.
The papers recorded the facts of his life.
The world condescended to pause.

Men spoke of the part he had played in the strife
And voted him formal applause.
Now his name is forgot and his fame is forgot.

And of all the processions who wend through the valley of shadows none visit the spot.
To murmur: "This man was my friend."
—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Quittin'.
It ain't the failure he may meet
That keeps a man from winnin';
It's the discouragin' complete
That blocks a new beginnin'.

You want to quit your habbits bad,
And when the shadows fittin'
Make life seem worthless like an' sad,
You want to quit your quittin'!

You want to quit a-layin' down
An' sayin' 'hope is over,'
Because the fields are bare an' brown,
Where once we lived in clover.

When killed from the water car,
It's painful to be hittin'
The earth; but make another start.
Cheer up, an' quit your quittin'!

Although the game seems rather stiff
Don't be a doleful doubter;
There's always one more lummig if
You're not a down-and-outer.

But fortune's pretty sure to flee
From folks content with sittin'
Around an' sayin' 'He's N. O.'—
You've got to quit your quittin'!

When a Great Man Dies.
The flags are hung half-mast to-day,
But they'll all be high to-morrow!
This is the best of worlds' cruel way.
Ah! this is how we sorrow!

A moment's grief, a brief delay
From plow and field and furrow—
The flags are hung half-mast to-day!
But they'll all be high to-morrow!

We mourn one hour, we pause to pray
(Sad prayers that we murmur borrow!)
One little while we softly say:
Poor words of pain and sorrow.

The flags are hung half-mast to-day,
But they'll all be high to-morrow!
The earth; but make another start.
Cheer up, an' quit your quittin'!

Inter Nos.
I did not know that Heaven was Heaven
Until my heart touched mine;
I did not know that Love was Love
Until I drank of thine.

I did not know that Wrong was Wrong
Until I ruled thy soul;
That Weak was Weak and Strong was Strong
Until I paid the toll.

And now I know that Love is Love,
For I cannot regain;
And now I know that Hell is Hell,
For I can feel its pain.

BUBBLES

By BRIDGET O'BRIEN

Although friends of only a few weeks' standing, they were nevertheless true comrades in every sense of the word. Already they had cemented the magic bond of union, and their joys and sorrows were common property, their trust and satisfaction in one another perfect, and because their present pastime was carried on in silence—blowing bubbles together on that sunny summer day—the children's bliss was none the less complete.

Seated on two low stools on that shady lawn, a basin of billowy soap suds between them, a long clay pipe in each right hand, they were engaged in friendly converse, as with heads thrown back and eyes half closed in dreamy contemplation, they watched the airy bubbles as they wafted upwards one after the other, in silent ecstasy. Then, as one larger and brighter than its predecessors followed suit the silence was broken by eager exclamation:

"Oh, how lovely!"

"Oh, what a beauty!"

"I see pink—blue—gold—"

"I see yellow—violet—green—"

"There, it's burst!" came the mournful wail, as the bubble vanished, and a little shower of spray fell on the upturned faces.

As in childhood dreams of the present are forever intermingled with possibilities of the future, so into the boy's mind stole a faint analogy to that larger bubble-life.

"When I am a man," he began reflectively, flaking up the contents of the basin for further use, "when I am a man—"

"When I am a woman," chimed in his companion, dabbling her small hands in the suds, and speaking quickly and excitedly, "when I am a woman I'll be tall, and rich, and beautiful. I'll have lovely dresses, and heaps of grand friends, and I'll drive in a carriage every day, and—and—I'll marry a man with millions and billions of money, and live happy ever afterwards!"

"That is all very well for a woman," returned he with unconscious disdain, "but that sort of thing won't do for me. When I'm a man I shall be a doctor like father, and set people's legs, and cut off their arms, and everybody nearly will send for me."

They laid aside their pipes, left their stools, and betook themselves to a bank at the far end of the lawn, where they lay dreaming dreams of delightful anticipation, until called back to the demands of the present by the clanging of the nursery tea-bell.

"And when you are a woman," said the boy, pausing at the entrance to the nursery, and speaking with an air of condescension, "we'll still be chums, you know; and if you cut your head, or break your nose or anything, if you come to me I'll mend you."

"All right, I'll remember!" she nodded gravely, and the conversation dropped as they hurried in and prepared for the function of nursery tea.

Twenty years—how time flies! It had transformed Nora into a graceful woman of seven and twenty, a woman of means and position. She shared her home with an elderly companion. The uncle whose ward she had been from her childhood days had recently died, leaving her practically alone in the world as regards near relatives, but surrounded by friends, and eagerly sought after by many. She used the good things of this world "as not abusing them," appreciated the beautiful in nature and art wherever they were to be found, and from this fuller conception of life derived happiness, its own sure reward.

In one spot, especially, she centered her interest and her bounty, a large children's hospital in the heart of the city. It was in passing down one of the wards one day, her hands laden with flowers, her bright words and tender sympathy lavished here, there, and everywhere on the little sufferers, that she met the friend of her childhood—Cuthbert Ogilvie. Not that they recognized one another at the time, the years had changed them too much for that. He saw in her merely a beautiful and well-dressed woman, with that trust of all womanly charms, "a heart at leisure from itself to soothe and sympathize." She saw in him a young doctor, dark, earnest and alert to the needs of his patients, a little child, with a face in which tenderness and strength bled one with the other, "the face of one who might be trusted," she thought as she moved away.

Dr. Ogilvie was already making strides in his profession, and, ready, at the age of 29, was secretly marked by his contemporaries for greater things. But nowhere did he appear to greater advantage, never did he grapple more with the needs and emergencies of the hour, than when he dealt with the sorrows and sufferings of the little ones, and made their cause his own.

For some time the friends of long ago met and passed on their way as strangers.

Then one day Dr. Ogilvie put the question that had for some time hovered on his lips:

"Strange to say, though we have often met, I am not yet aware of your name."

"Miss Hamilton is my name—Nora Hamilton," and she looked at him with a slightly questioning smile.

"Is it possible?" with a start. "Then surely we are old friends? Have you altogether forgotten Cuthbert Ogilvie?"

"Never!" she exclaimed impulsively, extending her hand. "That accounts for it! Your voice and manner seemed strangely familiar. I thought we had met before! Ah, those dear early days. I shall not soon forget them. But you must call and see us, Dr. Ogilvie, for old times' sake at least, and smilingly she claimed his promise ere she drove away.

In the midst of his busy life he obstructed, persistently before him, that vision of a sweet earnest face, bent anxiously over a sick child, that picture of womanly pity and care; and before many days were gone, Dr. Ogilvie discovered that he had found his ideal—in the person of the little friend of long ago.

The summer days sped on, and the old intimacy was resumed, with mutual appreciation. At an early date Dr. Ogilvie fulfilled his promise, and either in the hospital or in other social ways they constantly met. Nora grew unknowingly to look for his visits, to miss his voice and step when he did not come, to rely on his opinions and judgment; in short, her whole heart unconsciously went out to him. That he was "a man to be trusted" she realized more and more as time went on.

Then came days when the doctor was too busy to look up his friends, days when he became distant, and the harmony of life somehow seemed to jar. For Cuthbert Ogilvie came to know to what their friendship was tending. He was a comparatively poor man, with only prospects before him. What position had he to offer a wealthy woman? And because he could not content himself with Nora Hamilton's friendship he almost withdrew from her companionship altogether.

Nora Hamilton sat in her drawing room with troubled face and tear-dimmed eyes. The bank in which all her wealth was intrusted had suddenly and unexpectedly failed, and poverty stared her in the face.

She wondered dreadingly what she would do for a livelihood—be a companion or governess, she supposed. Then it was that a caller was announced, and turning in startled dismay she saw Cuthbert Ogilvie coming towards her with outstretched hands, and sympathy and concern in every line of his countenance.

"Miss Hamilton—Nora! Whatever is the matter?"

"Only the ups and downs of life," she answered with a wavering smile; "my riches have taken to themselves wings and flown away, and I am not yet resigned to the inevitable."

"And what is the inevitable?" he asked.

"To be a governess or companion, I suppose, Dr. Ogilvie! There is absolutely nothing left."

"Nothing? Then listen one moment! Nora, I came this morning to tell you that I have had the offer of a partnership in a flourishing practice. I intend to accept it on one condition only—I take my wife with me. I have loved you for long, dear, you share my joy. It is not much that I can offer, but your news makes me speak. I care so much!"

"So do I," she answered softly. "Cuthbert, riches have flown away, but love has come."

They were seated in a train bound for their honeymoon in Bonnie Scotland, and as they compared notes of happy memories, and built castles of future bliss together, the time sped quickly away. The train drew up in Carstairs Junction, and with smiling eyes she directed his attention to a large picture that stood forth artistically above the white walls and grime—Millais' "Bubbles."

"Do you remember, Cuthbert," she queried, "the day when as children we blew bubbles together, and talked of what we would be?"

"Yes," he replied, with a proud glance at her sweet face, "and I remember also that my wife was going to marry a man with millions and billions of money, and live happy ever after. Nora, I wish it were in my power to give them to you, dearest!"

"Ah, but they were only bubbles," responded she serenely, "bubbles, beautiful and bright, that have had their day. But, Cuthbert, her eyes turned to his in wifely devotion, "I am perfectly happy and satisfied, dear, and my greatest blessing of all came down when the bubbles burst!"

Dogs as Favorites.

Outdoing most of the queer things that have been done at society dinners and coming out parties, it was asserted on good authority that the favors at the dance given in honor of Miss Marjorie Gould, 17 years old, were gold cigarette cases and cute little Pomeranian dogs. Up to a late hour last night none of the guests were seen coming out of the Plaza hotel, where the dance was held, and of with any of its squealing puppies, but probably the recipients thought it would be better to leave the animals in the hotel until the morning. One of the guests said all the dogs were tagged, and there would be no harsh words about ownership. As to the gold cigarette cases, scores of the men guests were seen drawing them proudly from their waistcoat pockets.—N. Y. Press.

First Wedding in Eight Years.

For the first time in eight years the wedding bells rang recently after the morning service at the Parish church of Lindsell, Essex, which has been almost deserted owing to the population and decrease of the town. Two laborers who have been waiting in this "Sweet Auburn" for cottages for some years led their brides to the altar, and the few villagers left made the occasion a memorable one.

A LITTLE TRAGEDY.

Monday.

Carson—Well, how are things? Gebhart—Couldn't be better. I called on my tailor to-day to tell him I couldn't settle his account just yet, and found him out, too; I called on my butcher and he also was out. Splendid luck, eh?

Tuesday.

Carson—Well, how are things to-day? Gebhart—Couldn't be worse. You remember my telling you yesterday that I had called on my tailor, butcher and grocer, and found them out? Carson—Yes. Gebhart—Well, when I got home they were all waiting for me!—New York Herald.

TOO MUCH FOR HIM.

Max—That is a stunning winter suit you have on, old man. Day—Yes. When I got the bill I felt as if somebody had hit me in the face with a snowball.

Warning.

"He who takes a wife takes care"—In that there's no mistake: Although it very much depends Upon whose wife you take.

—Judge.

Knows Our Weakness.

"He's a great success. He can make everybody believe that he is very wise, and so he gets what he wants." "How does he work it? He really hasn't much sense." "No, but he knows how to assume an air of respectful admiration for you that's more effective than any con talk ever sprung."—Cleveland Leader.

Smooth and Hard.

They were roller skating in the big rink. "Suppose," began the young man, with a far-away look, "suppose I should fall, strike the floor and put myself out of business?" "In that case," laughed the pretty girl, "I suppose you would have a hardwood finish."

An Infant Industry.

Trotter—How is your old friend Blank getting along? Homer—Oh, he's making a fortune out of an infant industry. Trotter—Infant industry? Homer—Yes. He manufactures incubators.—Chicago Daily News.

Making Sure.

"Did you charge that man for that steak?" asked the butcher. "I think so," replied the clerk. "Well, charge it again and be sure." "That wouldn't be right." "Perhaps not; but I'd rather charge it twice than forget it once."—Yonkers Statesman.

His Glorious Past.

Sympathetic Matron (giving him a plate of hash)—You haven't always been compelled to beg for your living, have you? Raymond Storey (with a gleam of pride)—You bet I haven't, mum! I was wunst operated on fur appendicitis!—Chicago Tribune.

Real Bracers.

Harker—There goes a chap who has braced people all over town for a quarter. Barker—Great Jupiter! He doesn't look like a beggar! Harker—And he isn't. He manufactures a 25-cent pair of suspenders.—Chicago Daily News.

Would Arouse His Ire.

Stubbs—This old book states that William Shakespeare used to swear by the stars. Penn—Well, I guess if Bill could see some of the alleged theatrical stars going through his plays these days he'd swear at them.—Chicago Daily News.

Forgot to Think.

Foot Litter—Your brother's lost his position in that company, I hear? Miss Sue Brette—Yes; he had a thinking part, and he made a break. "How could he make a break in a thinking part?" "He said he didn't think."—Yonkers Statesman.

Encourages Him.

Yeast—Does your wife care if you go to your club much? Crimsenbeck—No, she rather encourages my going. "She does?" "Yes; she does her own cooking, you know."—Yonkers Statesman.

Couldn't See It.

"Were you ever in Yellowstone Park?" "Yes—once." "What is it like?" "Lord, I don't know! It was on my wedding trip."—Cleveland Leader.
